IRMA LEGION SPORTS, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8

Celebrate Silver Anniversary

On June 26 a large number of relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Prior to help these long-time and well-known residents of the Orbindale district celebrate their silver wedding after a period of congratulations and reminiscence, the ladies present served a bountiful buffet supper from a table centered by summer flowers.

The bride wore a dress of figured nylon sheer in pastel. At her shoulder was a corsage of red roses which had been pinned on by her elder daughter, Mrs. V. Johnson.

The bride's table laid with a hand-crocheted cloth, was centred by a three-tiered wedding cake, beautifully decorated in white and silver and flanked by silver candelsticks. Seated at the table with the bride and groom were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Prior, and Mrs. I. Hunter, parents and aunt, respectively, of the groom.

Mr. Donald Gunn proposed a toast to the long life and continued happiness of the popular couple. Later, on behalf of those present, he presented them with a chest of silver.

In the evening a host of friends gathered at Orbindale school to continue the celebration of the happy occasion far into the night.

Guests from outside the Irma community included Mrs. V. Johnson of Wetaskiwin, daughter of the house, Mrs. I. Hunter of Victoria, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Feist of Hanna, niece and nephew of Mrs. Prior.

Bridal Shower For Laurina Ostad

Miss Laurina Ostad, whose marriage takes place this week-end, was the guest of honor at a bountiful bridal shower held in the basement of the Irma United church on the evening of June 30.

The room had been beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and wedding bells and large bouquets of Japanese lilies. The bride-to-be entered to the strains of the wedding march harmoniously played on two accordions by Marjorie Hurst and Black.

Mrs. B. Long as mistress of ceremonies, escorted Laurina to the seat of honor, which, believe it or not, was placed in front of a butcher's block whereon lay wedding cards with meat prices and a large cleaver.

Mrs. Long led a song song accompanied by the two accordions. An interesting contest was then conducted by Mrs. J. C. McLean. This contest was won by Mrs. R. C. McFarland. An amusing resting and encore was given by Mrs. M. Chase and Mrs. H. W. Inglis led some stunts songs.

An accordian duet and encore was played by Mrs. Black and Mrs. Hurst and was very much enjoyed.

Another good contest by Mrs. Symington followed. The winner this time was Mrs. Alma Enger.

Then the shower sponsors, Mesdames Gunn, Milne, Symington, Bryson, Long, Simmerman, Kohrer, Hurst, Black and Chase, sang an original song "There's Something About a Butcher." Laurina was then asked to take the cleaver and make an incision in the Butcher's block.

On doing so she found it to be made of cardboard and filled with lovely gifts. Two butcher boys who had a strong resemblance to Mrs. Milne and Mrs. Symington arrived just then laden with properly wrapped parcels from the "deep freeze."

The three young girls, Shirley Mae Brown, Marion Lovis and Sheila Lovis who will be bridesmaids were called upon to help open all the exciting and mysterious packages. When all these had been opened and admired, Laurina feellingly thanked the many friends present and gave explicit instructions on how to find her new home when her friends visit Jasper.

A delicious lunch brought this happy occasion to a close.

This profession is worthy of your consideration if you have not already decided on a career. Do write or phone me for a pamphlet describing "Careers in Home Economics." Funny and Otherwise

The loud-mouthed roosters of Westerland, Germany, North Sea island resort were banished to the mainland recently for the duration of the vacation season. Town officials said the roosters awoke guests too early and would be executed unless removed.

"Where's your ticket?" demanded the collector. The sleepy traveler opened an eye, looked at the collector, and closed it again.

"Now, then, where is it? Haven't you got one?"

"The traveller opened his other eye. Then he shook his head.

"All right," said the collector. "You'll have to pay. Five and a please!"

"The sleeper took no notice. 'Don't you hear me?' cried the collector, 'Five and a please!'

For a moment the weary eyes opened again. Then a slight dawning of intelligence broke upon the traveller's countenance, and he answered: 'Eleven!'

A coffee salesman was travelling through Alabama, and as he waited for a train in a small town he chatted with a lady-looking man sitting on a seat at the station.

"Ever drink coffee?" he inquired, with an eye to stirring up interest in his line.

The man admitted he drank a lot of coffee. Fifty cups a day.

"Fifty cups a day? Inquired the salesman.

"Well, it helps," answered the lady one.

A man had been trying to write a telegram with a pen provided by the post office. After two or three ineffectual starts he turned to the girl behind the counter and said: "Is this by any chance the pen used by King John at the signing of Magna Carta?"

The girl replied: "Inquiries on the right, sir!"

"So you suffer from indigestion?" asked the helpful friend. "Well, what could be better than drinking a pint of warm water after every meal?"

"Indigestion?"

Tommy was tired of the arithmetic lesson. He was waiting for the teacher to correct his sums so that he could go.

"Your last answer is wrong," the teacher said. "You must stay behind."

Tommy glanced at the clock. "How much am I out, sir?" he asked.

"Ten cents," was the reply.

Tommy put his hand in his pocket and produced the money.

"I'm in a hurry, sir," he said. "Do you mind if I pay the difference?"

"I'm only working two days a week, now," "Why, I thought you had a six-day-a-week job?"

"I the boss is out four days a week!"

Mrs. Long: "Do you feel better this morning, Mrs. Short?" Mrs. Short: "I do, an' then again I don't."

Mrs. Long: "That's bad, for I don't know whether to say I'm sorry or glad."

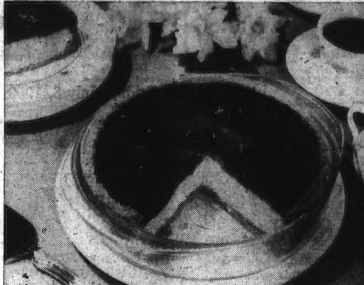

"I trust, Miss Tappitt," said the family employer to his stenographer, "that you have something in reserve for a rainy day."

"Yes, sir," answered the young woman. "I'm going to marry a man named Macintosh."

"Ma," said the little girl who was reading a geography book, "where is the state of matrimony?"

"That," said the mother, "is one of the united states."

APPETIZING RECIPES

This is a pie that will be welcome at any party or at Sunday dinner! It has a Strawberry Cheesecake filling in an easy Graham cracker crust.

STRAWBERRY CHEESECAKE
For the Graham cracker crust, combine 1 1/2 cups Graham cracker crumbs (about 18 crackers), 2 tbsp. sugar, 1/4 tsp. nutmeg and 1/2 cup softened butter. Blend thoroughly. Press crumbs firmly on bottom and sides of a 9-inch cake dish. Bake in moderately hot oven, (375 deg. F.) 6 minutes or till lightly browned. Cool.

For the filling you will need: One package lemon pie filling, 1/2 cup sugar, 1/4 tsp. salt, 1 1/2 cups water, 1 egg, beaten; one 8-oz. package cream cheese, 1 cup plain gelatin, 2 tsp. cold water, 1/4 cup boiling water, 1 cup strawberry preserves.

Blend pie filling, sugar and salt in a saucepan. Gradually add 1 1/2 cups water and the egg, mixing thoroughly. Cook over low heat until thickened, stirring constantly. Soften cream cheese; gradually stir in lemon mixture. Beat with a rotary egg beater until smooth.

PRINCE ALBERT.—The days of the wild timber wolf in northern Saskatchewan are numbered.

According to Harold Read, northern game supervisor here, control programs carried out over the past two winters have sharply reduced the numbers of this voracious predator, which destroys up to 50,000 caribou, deer, elk and moose annually in Saskatchewan.

The past winter's program rang the death knell for 229 adult and an estimated 650 unborn timber wolves, compared to about 400 adult, unborn wolves destroyed last year.

Mr. Read said best kills this winter occurred in a "buffer zone" reaching from the 56th parallel in Saskatchewan to the 61st parallel in the Northwest Territories, an area of roughly 40,000 square miles. Here, control measures were undertaken jointly by the provincial game branch and federal Department of Resources and Development.

Inside the zone, 51 bait sets destroyed 159 adult wolves (21 were found at one set). Further south, 78 sets accounted for only 70. Put out last February, the baits consisted of caribou meat impregnated with strychnine. They were located on isolated lakes to avoid poisoning forest-dwelling fur bearers and were destroyed prior to the spring ice breakup.

Wolf carcasses were also disposed of, except where used as bait. Mr. Read reported that at one point, just inside the Territories boundary, an unusually large pack of wolves had cleaned up a bait set, plus a freshly killed caribou, and were starting to eat their less fortunate kin. "All we could do was saturate these carcasses with strychnine in the hopes of getting more wolves," he said.

The past winter's program pointed up some interesting facts: 1. Many Saskatchewan timber wolves come originally from the Territories, usually with migrating caribou. 2. Most effective bait sets were those along caribou routes. 3. A Saskatchewan-Territories buffer zone is the best way to keep timber wolves out of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Read believed northern wolf control would continue "as long as the definite need for it exists." He expected control measures would bring about a "sharp increase" in northern big game, just as deer along Saskatchewan's forest fringe region have multiplied as a result of 1080 coyote control.

REGINA.—During May this year 198 drivers had their licenses either revoked or suspended. This was more than double the figure for May, 1952.

The penalties were imposed for a number of reasons. Driving after drinking cost 94 motorists their licenses. Dangerous driving was punished in 33 cases. Last May only 19 were found guilty of this offence.

Colored licenses were issued to 265 motorists. After a first offence a driver's license is taken away and a blue one substituted. For another offence within a year a red one is substituted. If the red license is violated, the offender's license is usually revoked completely for a time.

Struck by the number of youngsters getting into trouble, he founded the clubs to give them an outlet for pent-up energies. He recruited his first members on street corners.

Tired Driver Road Menace

Expert Urges Stimulant Every Two Hours On Trip

WASHINGTON.—A highway expert said the drowsy driver may be a greater menace than the drunken driver.

He offered some tips to help motorists stay awake—and stay alive.

L. S. Harris, executive director of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, said there were nearly three times as many fatalities on country roads in 1952 as there were in city and village districts.

Tying this in with highway fatigue, Harris said the farther a driver travels the more tired and less alert he becomes. He said an Army survey showed fatigue was a factor in nearly 37 per cent. of 348 highway accidents involving non-military vehicles.

The Army, he said, tried an experiment in 1946, making GI drivers stop every two hours for a cup of coffee. The Army accident rate abruptly dropped 24 per cent. Harris recommends the Army formula for combating tiredness, particularly during the summer season.

It calls for:

1. Keeping car windows open and breathing deeply.

2. Drinking coffee or other beverages every two hours.

3. If a driver becomes drowsy, he should stop the car, get out and flex his muscles by walking around.

4. If possible, driver should be changed every four hours.

5. If not, a sleepy driver should pull off the highway and take a snooze.

Harris said he was worried about the months ahead, unless people wake up and drive right.

"When vacation time rolls around, the nation's highways will be crowded, as usual—beyond the limits of safety," he said. "These are the conditions that contributed to many of the 38,000 dead and 1,300,000 hurt in traffic accidents last year."

The past winter's program rang the death knell for 229 adult and an estimated 650 unborn timber wolves, compared to about 400 adult, unborn wolves destroyed last year.

Mr. Read said best kills this winter occurred in a "buffer zone" reaching from the 56th parallel in Saskatchewan to the 61st parallel in the Northwest Territories, an area of roughly 40,000 square miles. Here, control measures were undertaken jointly by the provincial game branch and federal Department of Resources and Development.

Inside the zone, 51 bait sets destroyed 159 adult wolves (21 were found at one set). Further south, 78 sets accounted for only 70. Put out last February, the baits consisted of caribou meat impregnated with strychnine. They were located on isolated lakes to avoid poisoning forest-dwelling fur bearers and were destroyed prior to the spring ice breakup.

Wolf carcasses were also disposed of, except where used as bait. Mr. Read reported that at one point, just inside the Territories boundary, an unusually large pack of wolves had cleaned up a bait set, plus a freshly killed caribou, and were starting to eat their less fortunate kin. "All we could do was saturate these carcasses with strychnine in the hopes of getting more wolves," he said.

The past winter's program pointed up some interesting facts: 1. Many Saskatchewan timber wolves come originally from the Territories, usually with migrating caribou. 2. Most effective bait sets were those along caribou routes. 3. A Saskatchewan-Territories buffer zone is the best way to keep timber wolves out of Saskatchewan.

Mr. Read believed northern wolf control would continue "as long as the definite need for it exists." He expected control measures would bring about a "sharp increase" in northern big game, just as deer along Saskatchewan's forest fringe region have multiplied as a result of 1080 coyote control.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS ARE SAYING:

Recently a farmer wet-treated a full wagon box of oats for seeding the next day. It started to rain that night and continued throughout the next day. The oats were well soaked by then, and it was impossible to get on the land for a few days. In order to keep the seed from heating, the worried farmer poured on a few pails of cold water. That started the oats sprouting. Refusing to give up, he went ahead and planted the seed and was amazed to see the green shoots appearing the following day.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

IN THE SPRING

By KERRY WOOD

SLOWLY he took up the pen. He stared at the blank sheet a moment, his lean dark face reflecting the emotional turmoil. Then he swiftly wrote the traditional headings: Last Will and Testament. The finality of the words made him pause and stare out at the miracle of another springtime. But his mood was somber.

The bequests shouldn't take long, he thought, listing his few relatives and allotting his possessions impartially.

But what about Lucy? Ah, yes—Lucy! The way she smiled, with her eyes full of sparkling lights. Her laughter which came so often. Yet she knew when to be serious, too. Lucy was a loyal one, dependable at all seasons. It was too bad that he hadn't seen much of her lately.

"I'll put her name down," he decided, pleased with the decision. He wrote hastily.

(The pleasant interlude was finished.) Again the sharply chiselled features revealed inward trouble. What about Jennifer?

He shook his head, his mouth hardening. No need to mention her at all!

Yet it was really Jennifer who had caused him to take this step. Jennifer... with her lazy eyes, screened so sily to convey so much subtle meaning. And her full lips, so promising and yet so demanding. She was slow to laugh, and her laughter often hurt—this last time, it had hurt deeply. No! He would not write Jennifer's name in this document.

Now, "Directions for the funeral." He wrote the four words and stared at them solemnly. They recalled memories of funerals he had attended, each with its own poignant sadness. His mother's death, then his sister's, and Jimmy Dowler, Millie Foss, Bart Donomey. The fearful people, the cloying smell of flowers, and the organ swelling a dirge.

Music meant a great deal to him. At evening he loved to finger the piano, finding peace in the choried melody. Often he turned to the phonograph, playing records that suited his mood. His tastes were self-formed, his enthusiasms varied. He liked piano classics, old folk airs, the primitive thrum of Latin American music. But best of all were the full-bodied symphonies.

"I'll even direct what music they're to play—They can use records from my collection and play them on my machine. Of course, a real orchestra would be best."

His face became wistful. He had never attended a symphony concert. The farm was so far from the music centres, and time and money—As recompense, there had been the magical presence of the radio and his beloved records. He brusquely dismissed the orchestra idea; records would do. He grinned as he thought about one album, recordings by a vivacious Brazilian orchestra. He almost laughed, picturing the effect. Then leaned over the paper.

"Play the latter end of Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony, starting with the July Gathering of Country Folk and ending with Gladsome and Thankful Feelings after the Storm." That would be ideal, since he was a farmer. It'd please almost everyone, too.

That settled, he wrote swiftly: "Bury me in the lovely glade beneath Berry Hill on the back part of the farm, just about the brook. Don't bother about a headstone, but plant a young maple. Some of my earthly remains will go into its growth and every spring I'll be reborn again."

Pleased, he read over the document and signed it with a flourish. He felt better; a lot better.

"Now I can forget about it. After all, if I last the normal span, there's still another 40-odd years ahead of me!"

He began whistling the love song from Schubert, but stopped abruptly when he remembered that the flirtatious Jennifer had just broken his heart with her cruel laughter when he said so.

"Maybe it's just as well," he muttered, staring moodily out the window. "Man, it's a grand evening! I'll bet a hatch will be on the creek right now. The trout'll be rising mad."

Eagerly, he reached for his rod and reel.

"I could call for Lucy on the way, too—it'll be good to see her."

Whistling the love song, the young man hurried across to the neighboring farm.

Berry-Pickers Excursion In Operation Again

The annual berry-pickers excursion from Alberta and Saskatchewan to British Columbia is again under way, with one of the largest berry crops in the history of the Fraser Valley in prospect.

L. J. Hutchison, Director of the provincial farm labour division, said the excursion fares are the same as last year. The single one-way fare to B.C. is $10.00 and the fare home is $5.75 making a total of $15.75.

Recruiting of berry-pickers, women or at least 18 years of age, is being done through National Employment Service offices in Regina, Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Yorkton, Saskatoon, Prince Albert and North Battleford. Those who obtain tickets independently will have no basis for obtaining refunds.

Although it is hoped excursionists will remain in B.C. until the berry harvest is completed, Mr. Hutchison said teachers and others who have reason to do so will be able to return at reduced fares any time after August 15. The return limit is November 30.

Agricultural experience is an asset in the work but is not necessary. Batching quarters are supplied at each berry farm.

Skin Specialist Gives Facts About Sunburn And Its Care

Sunburn is every bit as much a real burn as one you might get by touching something that is too hot, warns Dr. R. Kane Schachter, Toronto skin specialist. The sun is good for people, both in producing vitamin D (which prevents rickets) and as a general tonic combined with summertime relaxation, but it must be taken in moderation.

In the latest issue of Health magazine, Dr. Schachter gives brief answers to a list of questions people most often ask about sunburn. Here are her answers:

Can sunburn lead to serious consequences, or is it simply a temporary uncomfortable experience?—Yes, it can be serious. With each burn there is damage produced, depending upon the severity of exposure. One may end up with atrophy or scar pigment, depigmentation, and freckle-like lesions, so-called "satellite" skin.

Can sunburn produce skin cancer?—Repeated and chronic damage may eventually lead to skin cancer.

When is sunburn serious enough to warrant visiting a physician?—If there are bad blisters and/or if the person has such symptomatic complaints as headache, nausea and vomiting.

What is the best way to give first aid to a badly burned back?—A simple jelly will help if there are no blisters. If there are blisters use a cold compress and a jelly such as vaseline.

Is there such a thing as a commercial preparation that can be applied to the skin to prevent burning?—A preparation containing para-aminobenzoic acid or esters to screen out the short burning rays of the sun and allow the longer tanning rays through is the most satisfactory to date.

Are some parts of the body more susceptible to sunburn than others?—Yes. Prominent parts, such as the nose, and mucous membranes, such as the lips, are particularly susceptible.

Does overexposure to the sun affect the hair and the eyes as well as the skin?—Hair becomes dry and brittle, and the glare of the sun may produce eyestrain and even a conjunctivitis.

Are children's skins more sensitive to the burning rays of the sun than adults?—Yes. Their bodies have not the protective layers of pigment, and their heat-regulating mechanism are more sensitive than adults.

How much exposure to the sun is too much?—Any amount producing redness or swelling—the so-called "erythema dose".

Is it true that fair people burn more readily than those of darker complexion when exposed to the sun?—Yes, because they have not a protective layer of pigment.

Does one burn more or less if the skin is dry or if one is continually in and out of the water as when swimming?—One burns more if in and out of water. In the water there are the added reflected rays of the sun in addition to the direct rays.

Can one stand longer exposure at the end of the summer than first thing in the spring?—One may stand longer exposure at the end of summer because one is more prepared and the sun's rays are less direct.

Re Frank Slide of 1903

(From The Viking News)

This spring there have been quite a number of newspaper stories and some radio talks about the Frank Slide—no doubt because the disaster happened fifty years ago. I could write a short story about it, which might be of interest—especially to those who have not seen and may not see any of the results of the slide.

During part of 1902-03 I was employed in the CPR roundhouse at Cranbrook, B.C. It was on what the boys called Higgle's gang, as Harry Higginbotham, a very fine man, was my hardworking foreman. He was also foreman of the wrecking crew and it was up to him to see that the Auxiliary cars, containing wrecking equipment, one car for living quarters, were ready at all times, to go on short notice. I was a member of this crew and we were liable to be called day or night.

S. J. Hungerford was the Locomotive foreman—no mean position for a man his age. He was in charge of all Rolling Stock—locomotives and firemen, roundhouse and car-repair employees, etc., for the division. He was a clever man, had started right at the bottom in Montreal shops and knew his job, and was well liked by the boys. On most wrecking jobs, Mr. Hungerford went along to supervise.

In about July, 1902, we were doing some work east of Frank and on return trip were to put some ditched box cars on the track near the coal mine at Frank. The coal mine was in the base of Turtle Mt.—entrance to the mine being from the north and just sufficient room between mine entrance and the river for CPR spur line, loading tipples, etc., and the town was to the north a half mile or more and near CPR main line. Our cars were spotted within half a mile of the mine entrance and close to base of the Mountain in the evening. We had an hour or two to look around and "up." I believe Turtle summit was some 3000 ft. above the valley. We noticed that from the mine entrance up for some 1000, 1200 or 1500 ft. was very steep and that from that point up perhaps another 1000 ft. the rock was actually overhanging—I believe it is claimed that hundreds of thousands of tons were overhanging—then it tapered off some to a top, where there was a red flag which looked very small. While there we did a lot of star-gazing at the Mt. and the little flag. We worked there part of the following day, then started for over the summit at Crows Nest and home. I often thought it was good of Mr. Hungerford to have our train stop at "The Cave"—main source of the Old Man River. It was on north side of Ry., quite a large cave at the bottom of which one large stream of water flowed from a fissure in the rock. The stream may have been 3 ft. by 2 ft., am not too certain, but quite a nice creek flowed away, and I have a snap, taken of us, then in "The Cave."

The top slid off Turtle at about 3 or 4 a.m. April 29, 1903. There were no phones but we heard about it when we went to work the following morning. About 1000 lived in the mining town and 60 lives were lost. Some one drew on his imagination—rather recently to compose a song about the Leitch baby survivor. The Leitch home was demolished and the family scattered, but being at the edge of the slide all were found. I saw the Leitch family buried in one grave, a following Sunday in Cranbrook cemetery—father, mother and their three sons. The baby girl also sleeping with her parents was not hurt. She and a sister—possibly 12, and a sister around 16 were also at the funeral, being driven in a demerol. One of these older sisters, believed to be dead when rescuers found her, cried when they attempted to pull her out. Her shin was between two timbers around the rock and had to be released.

Another woman, a Mrs. Ennes, got out with her baby and told rescuers where to find her brother. This woman had a broken shoulder and her brother a broken leg. There were some sad stories but I'm sure most of the victims were buried under a lot of rock. When coming out here a few weeks later, I stayed the night at Blairmore Hotel and walked half a day over the scene of rock—mostly limestone I believe. It was said, the rock went 2½ miles from the mountain and covered 1300 acres—about eight quarter sections and I believe that. A hogback hill 400 ft. high near the Ry. was sheared off. Walking miles over the mess I didn't see anything like a tree or grass—all bur-led too deeply. Altho it may look comparatively level from the train, it is really quite the opposite, all ups and downs, with pinnacles of broken rock perhaps forty feet high with a huge chunk the size of a shack on the top and a couple of miles out. I remember seeing the end of a twisted Ry. rail sticking up, a mile from where the track had been.

The section which slid off has been estimated at 1300 feet in height—4000 feet wide and 500 feet thick. It went with a ski-slide effect and landed far beyond the river, which was not blocked at all, giving it the spreading effect. Only a small amount fell to block the mine entrance, killing two men there, and trapping a small night shift of 17 men who escaped in a matter of hours. (About 2 years later I talked to one of those trapped in the mine, at his home north of Camrose). A brakeman on freight on the mine branch, made a very hard run, with a lantern, across the slide and managed to flag the CPR passenger train from McLeod. A Calgary newspaper reported on that train walked across and no doubt made a scoop story for his paper.

I believe it took 4,000 men working in day and night shifts a month to build the Ry. over the rock.

The Mr. Hungerford mentioned above was promoted, about early in 1903, to Calgary to a bigger job and better pay cheque. I believe he was soon promoted to Winnipeg and from there he went to the CNR as vice president in charge of rolling stock and later was CNR president for several years. If still living his age will be about 90.

WHAT RAINFALL MEANS

Alberta is receiving great rainfalls at this season, so a few figures as to what the rainfall means in gallons and pounds may be interesting. In a number of sections rainfalls exceeding one inch in depth each have been frequent.

One inch of rainfall on one square mile is equal to 2,323,200 cubic feet of water.

One cubic foot of water is equal to 6.23 imperial gallons.

One inch of rainfall on one square mile would be 14,473,336 gallons, or 145,200,000 pounds, or 72,600 tons. With these figures in mind it will be easy to understand why sloughs and lakes fill up, and why the rivers and streams are in flood to accommodate the surplus water which the soil will not take up and which becomes "run-off" or waste.

One inch of rainfall on one acre equals 3,625 cubic feet, or 22,583 gallons, or 226,562 pounds, or slightly over 113 tons.

Yes, heavy rains are very beneficial if we get them at the right time. Don't know how many tons fell here Saturday afternoon, but there must have been several million.

EDMONTON REPORT

By Donald F. Smith

EDMONTON — Eyes of the nation's political observers will be turned with special interest on Canada's western provinces from now until the results of the August 10 general election are known.

With the Social Credit party moving into power in B.C. apparently as a majority government, the party's popularity in Alberta and the CCF support in Saskatchewan, political pundits are toying with the question of what is happening to the old-line parties in the west. The swing away from the traditional Tories and CCF is a puzzle to the average Saskatchewaner.

Preparations for the summer election are going full tilt with thousands of enumerators registering potential voters and nomination meetings being held regularly throughout the province.

Up to the middle of last week a total of 56 candidates had been nominated at meetings conducted by five political parties in the province's 17 federal ridings.

The breakdown was: Liberals, 17; Labor-Progressive, 12; CCF, 11; Progressive Conservative, 7; and Social Credit, 9. More meetings are scheduled for this and ensuing weeks by all the parties, except Liberal, which has nominated contestants for all the constituencies.

Noticeable is the boost in the number of LPR nominations. The party only placed two members in Alberta ridings in the last federal campaign in 1949. Neither was elected.

Only the Social Credit and Liberal parties nominated for the whole 17 ridings in 1949, with the Conservatives battling in 14 and CCF-ers in 13. Indications are that these parties will place about the same number in the present campaign.

In case you have forgotten Alberta's representation in the House of Commons after the 1949 election consisted of 10 Social Crediters, five Liberals and two Conservatives, both elected in Calgary ridings.

Of the 492,228 Alberta citizens eligible to vote that year, 341,222 exercised the right, with 126,507 of them marking an "X" beside the name of the Social Credit candidate in their constituency.

Start of the Alberta government's driver testing was announced last week and will start next Monday (July 6). Legislation for the set-up has been on the books for some time but an earlier start was delayed, officials said, pending a complete investigation of systems adopted in other provinces and states.

Even after Monday thousands of new drivers' licenses will be issued to persons who have not been tested, for the start will be made only in Edmonton and Calgary and within a 15-mile radius of these centres. Only indication given as to how long it will be before the program is extended was the officials' remark that a year has gone by since Manitoba started testing in Winnipeg alone and has not extended to smaller cities and towns.

"It won't take us that long," they said.

When the testing is broadened to include the rest of the province present plans call for a mobile testing station, which would make annual or twice annual visits to pre-designated centres.

No person will be issued a driver's license until he has passed the test, which will include a question-and-answer type of examination, a physical test and an actual driving test on the road. The same test will apply to persons whose drivers' licenses have been suspended or who are held responsible in serious motor accidents.

Some modifications may be made in the tests as they will be operated at first. Officials say one of the reasons the whole province is not in from the start is the desire to iron out the wrinkles in the system adopted.

Of course, until every driver has been tested (even many now holding licenses) there will be persons behind the wheel who have no right to be.

NEW YORK — A thief slipped into an unlocked hotel suite where Mrs. Raymond Stark, daughter of the late comedian Fanny Brice, lay sleeping early Friday and made off with $300 in cash and jewelry valued at $40,000.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

The Barrel Explosion Gave Snider One — For Keeps.

By KERRY WOOD

"IT KILLING you now, Hartley?" whispered Snider, and he pressed the trigger.

Hartley walked slowly down the mountainside, Ben Snider, of Hartley and Snider, the city's best brokerage team. School chums, they'd joined forces on leaving college.

"I'm two dollars richer than you," Hartley chuckled as they counted their total initial assets.

"That makes you the senior partner," Snider grinned. "Well, make it: Hartley and Snider."

It had been a struggle at first, but Hartley was a go-getter with people and Snider was careful. Hartley called his lean partner "The Brain" while Snider jabbed Ben's paunch and hailed him as "The Front."

"We're getting along, but I'm against joining this country club," protested Snider. "We can't afford it."

"Come on, miser," Hartley boomed. "It's got prestige and people in 'gobs'."

They met Marion at the club, becoming friendly rivals at once. Three fun-packed weeks later, she had her choice. Snider shook Ben's hand in congratulation and Marion gave him a kiss.

"The first boy gets named after you, chum," Hartley said. "You'll be the rich uncle."

"Sure," nodded Snider, "and you may not be fooling—if you'd quit plunging."

But Ben's plunging turned out curiously, it was Hartley who became cautious on a deal that Snider favored.

"It's the big chance," Snider declared.

"Too risky," Ben vetoed.

Snider privately cursed Ben's stubborn streak and, convinced of a gold opportunity, plunged with his own resources. He "borrowed" from the firm to recoup, losing that money too.

In panic, he confessed to Ben. "Well," Hartley was suddenly grave. "It's not playing fair or forget it! I'll write you a cheque on my own account and we'll see it through."

The delinquent partner managed a smile of gratitude, but that's when he began to hate Hartley. His chance came when Hartley got a letter from a mutual friend who'd heard of all things, a forest ranger. Tubby Jenon wrote a glowing account of his outdoor life.

"Let's go for a he-man holiday," Hartley boomed. "Let's go hunting!"

Snider agreed and they went hotly out to buy the gear. But city sportsmen need to shoot a deer or whatever it was Jenon could show them. Tubby showed when he saw the army.

"Greenhorn!" he derided with buns. You guys have enough junk to outfit an expedition."

"Look, Tubby," Snider showed his rifle. "I got a 30.06 calibre. While Ben bought a .270. Which is best?"

"They're both okay."

The thin man smiled, choosing a different calibre had been his own secret idea; and Jenon played trust into his hand: "I must pack gear up to the look-out man on the west mountain. While I'm gone, you fool around. You may get a moose."

"They're on the move. Day after tomorrow, I'll show you some sheep hunting that is hunting!"

Snider was now decided. Hunting accidents are commonplace; besides, everybody knew that Hartley was a careless sort and inexperienced.

So they said good-by to Tubby and set out. When they were three miles from the cabin, a black shape loomed out of the back-bush and Hartley flung up his rifle and fired. Miraculously, the animal went down.

"I got him!" he yelled. "A bull moose!"

He dropped his rifle and whipped out a knife, remembering what he'd read in magazines about bleeding the kill. He raced forward. Behind his back, Snider's glove's hands picked up Hartley's rifle, ejected the empty and rammed the bolt down on a live cartridge.

"Hartley!" he called.

His partner looked up from his bloody task. His happy triumph drained.

"I've hated you for a long time, Hartley. You took Marion from me, and you've played the high and mighty all these years with your crass luck. Now I'm settling the score. It's murder—but no one else will know! I'll explain how you cocked your gun for a second shot, then stumbled."

"Snider!"

"I'm killing you now, Hartley!" whispered Snider, and he pressed the trigger.

"I've always been a careless sort," Ben told Jenon that evening. "I must have chuckled that gun down without thinking. When Snider pointed it, I saw the muzzle was plugged with mud."

"That'll always make a heavy rifle blow up," Tubby nodded. "Well, he asked for it. He planned an accident, and that barrel explosion sure gave him one—for keeps!"

VERSATILE GROUP—Canadian National Expressmen in Montreal are a pretty versatile group and recently demonstrated their ability in the care and feeding of 375 pounds of Manitoba wildlife. The shipment—four timber wolf pups, three young badgers and six porcupines—arrived by rail en route to the Winnipeg Zoo in London, Eng. They were supplied by Winnipeg's Assiniboine Park Zoo following a telephone call from Wildlife officials offering to trade some skins for the timber wolves. Here Sam Jordan, of the express department, strikes up a friendship with one of the furry wolf pups.

GARDENING PENALTY

Many happy hours spent in the garden usually result in a crop of cuts and scratches, as well as flowers. Even small skin abrasions can turn into serious wounds unless they receive attention promptly. No matter how small, a wound should be cleaned and a dressing applied to keep out dirt and germs. Ready-made gauze and adhesive bandages keep out dirt and don't require elaborate bandaging. A first-aid kit should be kept handy in every home, cottage, office and car.

LEARN TO SWIM

The second of a series of four articles by Bevan Lawton, Saskatchewan Director of Swimming and Water Safety for the Canadian Red Cross.

At the Beach

The first time you get to a beach this summer, be sure that the shallow water part is safe, and do not go in unless there is an older person with you who can help you, and stay close to shore in waist-deep water.

The first thing to do is to get into the water and get wet—all over, of course. Then get down on your hands and knees and practice putting your head right under. Then try the breathing several times in a row, blow bubbles slowly then turn your head and grab a quick breath, turn your face back in and blow more bubbles.

The Sleighride

Face shore in waist-deep water, spread your feet, one in front of the other, crouch down until your chin is in the water. Now, put both arms straight out in front of you with the palms of your hands flat on the water. What do you know—your arms float! Push them down under water and soon they will float to the surface again. Well now that you are crouched down and hands out in front, hold your breath, put your face into the water, lean forward and push off the bottom, and you will slide through the water toward shore. Keep your arms and legs straight and your head down with ears under. Look at the picture. You should do this Sleighride over and over again.

How to Stand Up

After a sleighride you'll want to stand up—its easy—just (1) pull your knees in to your chest (2) push your arms down on the water—like in the picture. You should practice this in waist-deep water with someone in the water with you. But don't try to touch bottom with your hands, and don't lift your head 'till your feet are on the bottom.

Jolly Fish Float

This is easy to do. In waist-deep water take a deep breath, bend down and touch your toes. Hold this position and you will float with your back out of water. Swimmers sometimes get cramps in their legs and the experts use the Jolly Fish Float.

position so their hands are free to massage the cramped muscles. It is also used when swimmers wish to get out of their clothing in an emergency.

Sand Crawling

Here is how you can learn a simple leg kick. You must learn to use your very strong leg muscles before you do anything with your arms. So here we go Sand Crawling. Do a Sleigh Ride, then push yourself along by digging your toes into the sand—left foot then right foot—dig—push, dig—push. Soon you won't touch the bottom with your toes at all and your legs kicking up and down will move you forward, forward, ahead. Keep that head in the water! Keep your arms straight out in front.

Dog Paddle

When you have your leg kick going pretty well, you can start to imitate a dog. Do a Sleigh Ride, then pull your left arm straight down—then your right. Keep your hands going as though you were digging in the sand. Reach well forward with each hand. If you can, watch a dog's front paws to get the idea. Don't go too fast, take it easy. Keep trying. After you get the hang of it, try working together pretty well, try turning your head to grab a breath. Remember to blow the air out underwater. If this is too much to do all at once, hold your head up, but you can, expect some mouthfuls because your head is heavy and keeps pushing you under. Just remember it takes time to learn to do anything.

Next week we will tell you how to go about dealing and swimming on your back. Until then, keep practicing lesson one and lesson two. Whatever you do, don't go into any water unless you have someone with you who can help you in case of trouble. It's shallow water for you for a long time yet.

Buffalo Return To Old Haunts

Waterton Lakes National Park has an additional tourist attraction this year. After an absence of more than 50 years, buffalo may again be seen in this wildlife sanctuary.

In April, six head of buffalo were moved from Elk Island National Park, east of Edmonton, to Waterton Lakes National Park, to a special enclosure. The first calf of this new herd was born a few days after the animals' arrival.
